

Jim Woodrow - Hope

For every soldier with a gun, there's a freedom fighter who wants peace.

No matter which side you are on you've got to make a difference.

Every piece on this global game of chess, they all have a value,
all of them.

But the borders need to be preserved because as long as we have those, there's an escape route for our heroes.

And if we end up globalised with only one king, the pieces will all be on one side, regardless of their colour.

Problem is that at that point we'll all be slaves to the same master.

We'll all have nowhere to run from tyranny,
no heroes will have a place to run either.

Uprising will be nullified at the first sight of any hope.

So we need to try to protect our freedoms in any way we can.